

New Approach for HIPAA and Hospital Training Documentation

UniversityOfHealthCare has a complete solution for a healthcare organization's online HIPAA training and documentation. The company implements a combination of a learning management system and off-the-shelf HIPAA courses.

Los Angeles, CA (PRWeb) December 1, 2004 -- UniversityOfHealthCare, a leading e-learning solutions provider and publisher, reports that the combination of a Learning Management System, a Learning Content Management System, and off-the-shelf HIPAA content from UniversityOfHealthCare could be combined into a custom solution for training and documentation.

These content programs are available in the following formats:

- * Web-based on the UniversityOfHealthCare website at www.uohc.com/courseentry.htm
- * CD-ROM or Manual/CD-ROM combination at www.atlasbooks.com/uohc
- * Group licensing for a corporate Learning Management System
- * Library editions or booksellers wholesale via a standard supplier or www.atlasbooks.com/uohc

More information on the Learning Management Systems can be found at www.uohc.com/info.htm. A guide to UniversityOfHealthCare HIPAA courses can be found at www.uohc.com/hipaa.htm and descriptions are in the catalog at www.atlasbooks.com/uohc.

Dr. Farb, the CEO of UniversityOfHealthCare, said, "The idea is to find the perfect mix of proprietary organizational content with off the shelf content in combination with a low cost delivery method for the thousands of employees that most hospitals have. The integrated Learning Content Management System allows them to place their own content such as PowerPoint presentations into an e-learning package. By offering an affordable system with no user fee in several enterprise and hosting options, we can meet the price sensitivity of the hospital market and provide them with more choices and high quality technology at the same time."

"Since HIPAA requires training to be documented, and that the training should be specific to the organization, an integrated LMS/LCMS can provide the perfect solution. For example, a company could get one of our off the shelf HIPAA courses and add their own policies to that course and present it as one single course. Or a hospital could load up its PowerPoint presentation on HIPAA and create its own test within the system-all without programming knowledge."

UniversityOfHealthCare is a total e-learning solutions provider for management and healthcare. Its services include implementation of a learning management system, consulting, hundreds of web-based courses, and manual and CD publishing. For example, it has unique series on Bioterrorism, JCAHO and OSHA compliance, HIPAA training, Leadership, and much more.

The UniversityOfHealthCare website is www.uohc.com and the CD catalog is at www.uohc.com/CDROMs.htm. That page has a link to slide shows of screen shots from the courses. Group sales: sales@uohc.com.
